In a few short years, American Indians in California went from being the poorest people in the state to among the richest--from being virtually invisible, to being the most powerful political lobby in the 6th largest economy in the world. For the Cabazon and Morongo tribes of Southern California, the plaintiffs in the landmark Supreme Court case, the potential wealth from gambling was unimaginable. Years of excruciating poverty have not been lost on three-time chairwoman Mary Ann Andreas of the Morongo tribe, whose reservation is near Palm Springs. She remembers the dirt floor shack of her childhood, and the impossibility of dreaming for the wealth the tribe now holds. For Viejas tribal Chairman Anthony Pico, the abundance of today harks back to the times before contact with Europeans. Today, the State is trying to charge a gaming tax greater than the standard corporate rate, a challenge to the newly found abundance of California tribes. CALIFORNIA'S "LOST" TRIBES is the first documentary to go behind the facade of glitz and glamour of American Indian casinos to reveal the current conflicts over Indian gaming, explore the historical underpinnings of tribal sovereignty, and the evolution of tribal gaming over the last thirty years. Concern over gaming is further stoked by the development of casinos in rural lands, creating friction between tribes and non-Indians. CALIFORNIA'S "LOST" TRIBES captures the impact of gaming on Indian self-determination, and the challenges Native people face in defining the identity of their people for the future.

No Right to Choose? Last month, South Dakota signed into law the country's most restrictive abortion ban, outlawing abortions in almost all cases, including rape, incest and to protect the mother's health. NOW examines how anti-abortion activists have a much broader agenda, targeting sex education, contraception, and even the intimate personal decisions of young men and women. When is it appropriate for personal morality to become government policy?

Today, the headlines are filled with speculation about changes in the U.S. Supreme Court and what those changes might mean for abortion -- an issue that has divided the country for over 30 years. Heated rhetoric from both sides continues to be heard in courtrooms and on the campaign trail. But while attention is often focused on the arguments, there is another story playing out in local communities. Pro-life advocates have waged a successful campaign to reduce abortions in many places throughout the country. By using state laws to regulate and limit abortion and by creating their own clinics to offer alternatives to women, they have changed the facts on the ground. FRONTLINE investigates the steady decline in the number of physicians and clinics performing abortions and focuses on local political battles in states like Mississippi, where only a single clinic performs the controversial procedure.

The Senate neared a vote Thursday to extend $70 billion dollars in tax cuts, enacted in 2003, for five years. While Republicans credit these tax cuts with a surging economy, Democrats believe a majority of Americans are being left out. Ray Suarez reports on the tax bill. Then, Suarez speaks with Ryan Donmoyer, a congressional and tax reporter for Bloomberg news.

America's aging baby boomers are headed for a shock as they near retirement. In addition to Social Security, the pillars of retirement income for Americans have been either lifetime corporate pensions or employee-contribution plans such as 401Ks. But both retirement strategies are in trouble. Buffeted by pension cuts, corporate bankruptcies, and the 2001-2002 stock market crash, most boomers now expect to be working into their retirement years.

Although the financial markets will be closed on Monday, May 29, 2006, for Memorial Day, Nightly Business Report and Nightly Business Report News Brief will be fed as usual. Nightly Business Report will broadcast a holiday special called, "Work in Progress." Instead of minding machines, as our mothers and fathers did, American workers are now challenged to master increasing sophisticated technologies. It's no longer enough to just follow instructions, "problem solving" is now a job requirement. At the same time, our country is undergoing a dramatic demographic shift from an older workforce, to one dominated by younger, minority workers. Despite this wave of change, the average level of formal education in our workforce is the same as it was 25 years ago. By most measures, income inequality is growing and workers are taking on more economic risk on the job. In many ways, the nation is unprepared for the challenges of the changing workplace.

"Small Fortunes: Microcredit and the Future of Poverty" explores the issues of poverty and microcredit as it features profiles of numerous recipients of small loans in locales ranging from India to the Philippines to New York City. The one-hour documentary tells the stories of how short-term loans of even a few dollars have resulted in dramatic changes in lifestyles for families who otherwise would have no means of lifting themselves out of poverty. The film also interviews bankers, economists, scholars and other experts on past, present and potential successes of microcredit programs.

Changes at the White House. What do they have to do with price of tea, or China? Tonight on Washington Week. It's not exactly musical chairs at the White House these days, but it's close. Scott McClellan is out; Donald Rumsfeld apparently is in. As chief strategist, Karl Rove refocuses on the politics of survival: the White House in transition. But what has any of that mean when gas prices are the only thing anyone is talking about? And when even a picture-perfect visit from an important foreign dignitary is disrupted. What's a president to do? We look at the week's events with reporters and editors who've been covering them: Alexis Simendinger of National Journal; John Harris of the Washington Post; David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal; and David Sanger of the New York Times.

Iran, Iraq, the politics of gas prices, and the continuing cost of Katrina, tonight on "Washington Week." President Bush was talking gas prices today and so it seemed was everybody else all week. But that wasn't the only challenge on the president's plate: he hired a new White House spokesman, he threatened to veto on Congressional spending, his deputy chief of staff visited a grand jury, the secretaries of state and defense were dispatched to Iraq. And as the president visited Katrina-ravaged New Orleans, senators called for FEMA to be abolished. Where to begin? With the reporters covering the stories this week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

What the Iraq debate tells us about the Congress, the president, and about Iraq itself, tonight on Washington Week. Congress debates Iraq. Stay or go? Set a timetable or not? It seems like everyone weighed in. President Bush punctuated his position this week with a surprise trip to Iraq. We look at what happened on the ground. While he was gone, good news: his chief political aide, Karl Rove, will not be indicted in the CIA leak case. What does it all mean? We look at the politics, the polls and the substance of the week's developments with the reporters who have been covering them: Karen Tumulty at Time Magazine, Richard Keil of Bloomberg News, Gloria Borger of CBS News and U.S. News, and John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal.

Every branch of government weighed in this week on war, government secrets, workers' rights, and corruption. Tonight on "Washington Week," the Senate debates Iraq. Should we stay or should we go? Can the Democrats agree on a plan? Can the Republicans? And how much will events on the ground and U.S. public opinion affect the debate in Washington? The war on terror at home- a secret investigative tactic is revealed - the government's been tracking money transfers without your knowledge. But how broad is the government sweep? At the Supreme Court, a unanimous ruling in favor of employees' rights. What does it tell us about the intentions of the Roberts' court? And in federal court, a former Bush administration aide is convicted on charges arising out of ties to former lobbyist Jack Abramoff. Where else do those ties lead? Covering these stories this week: Dan Balz of the Washington Post; Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times; Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times; and Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal.

The highest Court in the land concludes its biggest week of the year with two blockbuster decisions: one, striking down the U.S. system of holding and trying detainees at the Guantanamo Naval Base in Cuba. Another upholding a politically motivated congressional map in Texas while rejecting a racially motivated one. What did these decisions tell us about this court and about this administration? Plus, the president, the vice president, and the House of Representatives all join forces to condemn journalists who disclose secrets. A contentious week in the capital. We take its measure with the reporters who have been covering it: Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, John Harwood of the Wall Street Journal; and

The story of the sycamore fig and its tiny pollinator describes one of the most remarkable relationships in the natural world - between a tree and a wasp. It is a relationship of utter dependency and a triumph of co-evolution. The detailed behavioral intrigue of the wasps that live hidden inside each fig contrasts with the tree's prominence in the African bush, where it is central to the lives of many animals - from elephants and ants, to birds and crocodiles. It provides for all, in ways which are diverse yet connected. Ultra-macro photography makes it possible to tell a wildlife story which has never been told before.

A powerful tornado is a terrifying phenomenon that continues to defy decades of scientific efforts to predict it. During one of the worst tornado seasons on record, a NOVA camera team chased across the Midwest, capturing hair-raising footage of highly destructive twisters in action. But HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER is much more than just another "extreme weather" show. Our story focuses on the efforts of two scientists at the University of Oklahoma to develop radically different approaches to forecasting twisters: one relies on "virtual tornados" created inside supercomputers, while the other involves hunting down real-life storms to collect data firsthand (the method that inspired the movie Twister). With jaw-dropping 3-D graphics generated by the National Center for Supercomputing Applications, NOVA's show features spectacular footage of these terrifying twisters. HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER gives viewers a front-row seat to the risky and thrilling art of storm chasing, complete with the latest research findings and state-of-the-art visual effects.

It's been many months since Hurricane Katrina struck New Orleans and the Gulf Coast, but the region is hardly back to normal. Fewer than half of New Orleans residents have returned since the storm, and 9.9% of Mississippi residents remain unemployed-more than double the national average. But there are some hopeful signs. Rebuilding plans are starting to take shape, and Federal funds are beginning to flow to affected areas. So what is the status of rebuilding efforts? As individuals struggle to piece their lives back together, are they getting the help that they need? And how will the Gulf Coast that emerges from the damage compare with the one that existed before Katrina?

American Experience presents The Alaska Pipeline, a one-hour documentary from producer Mark Davis. "The Trans-Alaska Pipeline changed just about everything and everyone it touched," says Davis, "from the people who opposed it to the people who supported it, the people who built it, and the state of Alaska." Workers battled Arctic weather to construct an 800-mile pipeline that traversed three mountain ranges, 34 rivers, and 800 streams, and that withstood earthquakes and extreme cold. The men, machines and money the pipeline brought to Alaska would forever transform the wilderness.

Scientific research has discovered that something is terribly wrong with our environment and that much of our planet's wildlife is in danger of going extinct. Wildlife extinctions are not a new phenomena. On at least five occasions during our planet's long geological history, catastrophic events wiped out vast numbers of species. The last great extinction happened sixty-five million years ago when a giant asteroid crashed into the Earth. The ash sealed the fate of the dinosaurs along with over seventy-five percent of the world's plants and animals. But today, the threat of what scientists call "the sixth extinction" won't come from outer space or a volcanic eruption. The next extinction will be the result of human activities. The urgency to avoid a sixth extinction presents us with enormous challenges. What we need now are the efforts of people everywhere - all those who are willing to find ways to strike the right balance - between what we want - and what our planet's wildlife can endure.

Cloud: Wild Stallion of the Rockies"--Filmed in the mountains of western Montana, this poignant, engrossing story focuses on an extraordinary wild stallion whose life has been recorded since his moment of birth in the wild by Emmy-winning filmmaker Ginger Kathrens. Ms. Kathrens' exceptional footage follows the striking white horse she names Cloud through a series of harrowing struggles and adventures, including expulsion from his own horse family, the rites of passage as he develops into a dominating stallion, his capture in a government roundup and subsequent release, the struggle to survive harsh winters and frequent summer lightning strikes, and the dangers posed by illegal horse shooters. As an illuminating visual record of the emergence of a natural leader, this is an unprecedented film about wild horses.

As global warming turns up the heat, researchers are stunned to discover that our sun is actually growing dimmer. Increasing air pollution allows less and less sunlight to reach earth's surface, a 'global dimming' that disturbs rainfall patterns and creates severe droughts. In an even more alarming twist, there is concern that recent success in solving the dimming problem is greatly accelerating global warming, melting ice caps and flooding coastal cities. NOVA examines a baffling climate conundrum and follows the disturbing implications of the discovery for our planet's future.

"Mystery of the Megaflood"--It was the greatest flood of the past two million years, and it posed a giant scientific riddle. A maverick geologist became convinced that near the end of the last ice age, thousand-foot-deep floodwaters had scoured out vast areas of the American northwest. Mainstream scientists scorned his theory, while he searched patiently for answers to what could have triggered such an inconceivably violent event. Finally, a remarkable discovery silenced the skeptics: traces of an enormous ice dam half a mile high, which had blocked a valley in present-day Montana and created an enormous lake behind it. With the help of stunning, realistic animation, NOVA takes viewers back to the Ice Age to reveal what happened when the dam broke, unleashing a titanic flood that swept herds of woolly mammoth and everything else into oblivion.

They're the flood victims who were left behind --the tens of thousands of household pets separated from their owners in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. Now, in this special episode of Nature, we take you to the front lines of the battle to rescue these helpless animals -- before it's too late. We travel with animal rescue teams by small boat through the flooded streets of the devastated city, searching for survivors -- a dog stranded on a rooftop -- a kitten trapped in the branches of a tree -- all without food and water for days -- or weeks. With the odds against them, rescuers use any means necessary -- up to and including a National Guard tank -- to reach these animals in distress. We're there as they retrieve the animals, and then -- amazingly, amidst all the chaos and destruction -- reunite the lucky few with their owners. Along the way, we'll see what happened to the other animal inhabitants of New Orleans -- from the zoo and aquarium to the wildlife of Lake Pontchartrain. Witness the heroic efforts to save Katrina's animal victims -- on Nature.

This is the 35-year epic story of Kusasi, the male orangutan at Camp Leakey in Indonesia, whose life is both the most well-documented and the most mysterious of any of his kind in the world. He began life as an orphan, a prisoner and a fugitive. Then he taught himself the ropes, watched his own back, trusted no one and rose to the top, where he has reigned for 15 years. Will the current power struggle between Kusasi and his rivals bring about his downfall? This is an extraordinary journey into the secret lives of males orangutans, about which comparatively little has been known until now.

"Toxic Transport" Every day, thousands of tons of deadly chemicals are moving through our towns and cities, largely unguarded and vulnerable to a terrorist attack. The government knows that, if attacked, these shipments could cause great harm and many fatalities, but are we doing enough about it? NOW investigates how, nearly five years after 9/11, our trains, boats and trucks carrying hazardous materials could be left so defenseless. Former Deputy Homeland Security Advisor Richard Falkenrath calls the exposure of these chemicals "the single greatest danger of a potential terrorist attack in our country."
